

Product Description

The chest press is one of the most popular workout machines in gyms and now it can be enjoyed in the fresh air all year long with the Royal Triple Station Chest Press. There are no weights to set or a seat to adjust which makes using the Royal Triple Station Chest Press an easy option to just sit down and start working out. The equipment uses a person's own body weight to operate the chest press and the universal design allows users to build the core muscles as well as gains in the chest and pectoral muscles as well as the shoulders and arms. High schools, college campuses and public fitness areas are perfect places to add this equipment as it has three stations so multiple users can get the benefits of this exercise at the same time. There's an instruction board in the center which provides tips and advice on correct form to help users with no knowledge of working different muscle groups.
